Returns from sixty-nine counties give Fenton (Republican) for Governor, 309,000; Seymour, 294,000; Fenton's majority, 15,000 on sixty counties, the heaviest Republican majority of the Empire State since the election of Governor Seymour, Massachusetts or Illinois. The vote in New York was unusually large, and was cast in a manner not by local, minor and personal issues, which have heretofore controlled the elections in this commonwealth. The issues alone, for instance, between Governor Fenton and Governor Seymour, in Holland. It is believed that the Republican Legislature will elect a successor to Senator Harris, succeeding Republican gains in nearly every locality, and the defeat of Democratic candidates for the public minor. In Albany County the Republicans have elected their entire ticket by a majority of 3,311; Cayuga County, Seward's home, gives a Republican majority of 1,000; Seneca, the home of Secretary, the Republicans gain to 150 majority. Westchester County, Mr. Fenton's home, gives a majority of 700 less than last year's in 1864. The Republican majority in New Jersey is about 1,000.
